

SAUDI ARABIA

Chris Schaefer

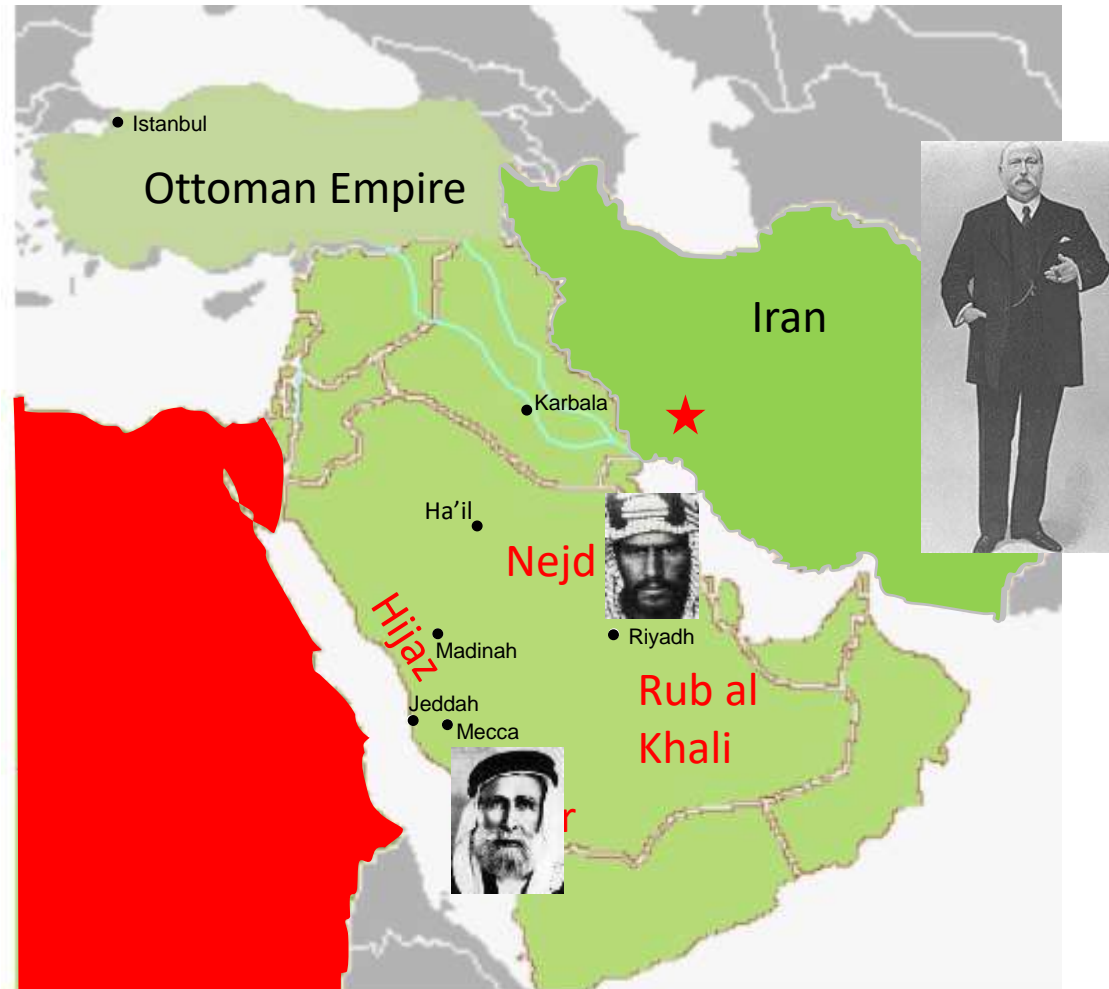

Chris.Schaefer@bataandiary.com

832-428-1977

Copies of all slides are available at:
www.bataandiary.com/SA.html

Oil in Iran

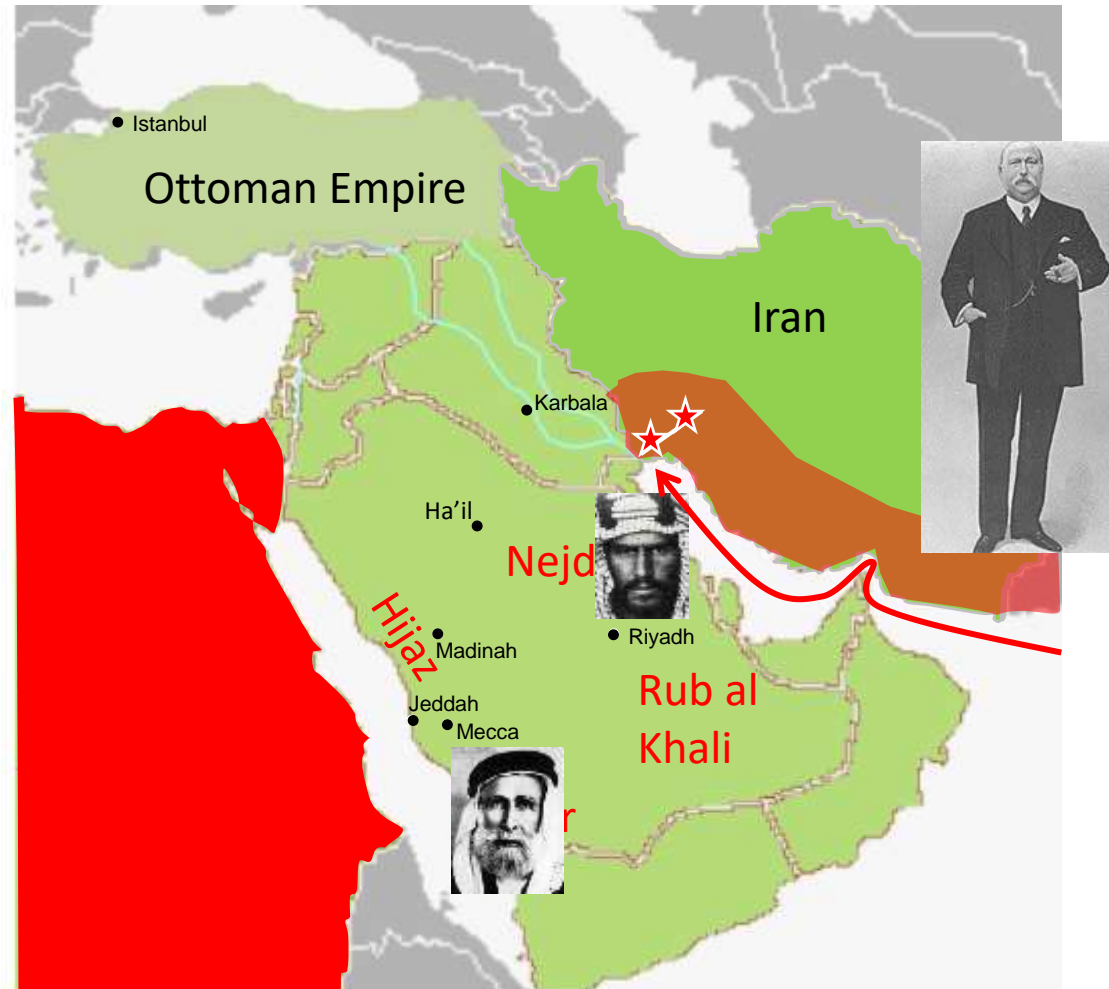

William D'Arcy, founder of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company

D'Arcy builds a desert pipeline to Abadan...

...and a refinery at Abadan protected by troops from British India.

Oil in Saudi Arabia

1933, King Saud awards his oil concessions to U.S. companies

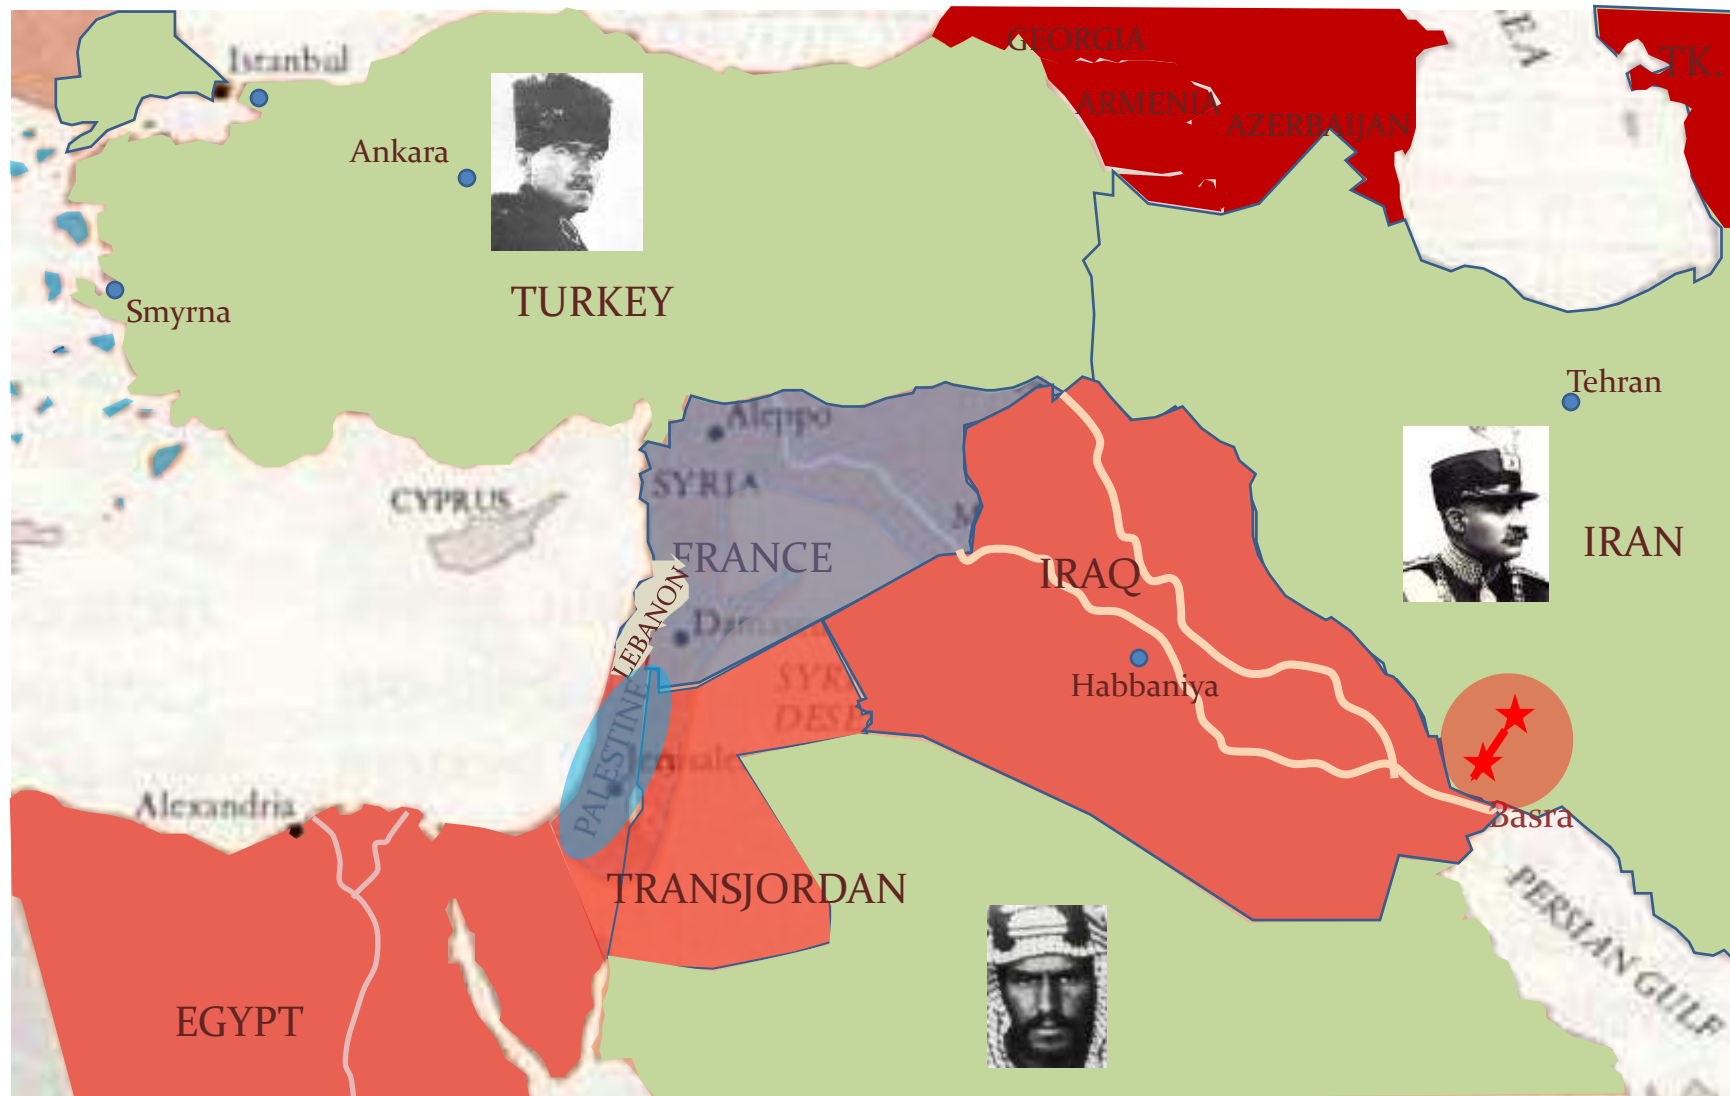

Dammam No. 7, the first commercial oil well in Saudi Arabia

ARAMCO

(The Arabian-American Oil Company)

World War II

Mustafa Kemal Attaturk, President of Turkey, Reza Shah Pahlavi, Shah of Iran, and Abdulaziz ibn Saud, King of Saudi Arabia, all declare their countries neutral during World War II.

Abdul Aziz ibn Saudi and FDR aboard the USS Quincy

Trans-Arabian Pipeline (Tapline) from Damman to Sidon, Lebanon

Iranian Prime Minister Dr. Mohammad Mosaddeq
Nationalizes the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company

Overthrow of PM Mosaddeq and the Iranian Parliament, August 19, 1953

Abdulaziz al Saud died November 9, 1953.

The Problems with Wealth

King Saud bin Abdulaziz al Saud

Mutawakkilite Kingdom (north Yemen)

Najran, Saudi Arabia

Crown Prince Faisal
bin Abdulaziz al Saud

King Saud
bin Abdulaziz al Saud

going to take a good, sincere look," said Mr. Conker, who was accompanied to the meeting by two other officials of his association.

He said he had asked Mr. Ford to lift a freeze imposed

It appears people are afraid to make long-term commitments," Mr. Conker said. He said that the public's concern about rising prices had "squeezed the housing construction industry into a corner."

urged the singing dancers, actors and musicians "to look for yourself" and said, "You'll have great joy and you'll have great anguish—that's part of it."

Miss Graham also had a

BY NEWSPAPER GUILD

Thomas P. Murphy, the second vice president of the Newspaper Guild of New York, was chosen president of the guild last night in its first contested election in 24 years.

Mr. Murphy, an employe of the circulation department of The New York Times, defeated Judy Klamesrud, a reporter at The Times, by 2,118 to 1,478 in balloting yesterday and Thursday by members of some 90 Guild units.

Harry Findell, the guild's secretary-treasurer, who ran with Mr. Murphy on the Guild Unity slate, was elected executive vice president over Peter McLaughlin, the unit chairman at The Daily News, 2,222 to 1,406.

Miss Klamesrud and Mr. McLaughlin headed the Revitalization party, which forced the challenge to the guild's usual

Arab Princes Described as High-Stakes Gamblers

LAS VEGAS, Nev., Dec. 13 (UPI)—Members of the Arab royalty, accompanied by bodyguards and food tasters, are reported to be gambling wildly at the casinos these days with $2,000 bets on the turn of a card or roll of the dice.

Morris Jaeger, the casino manager at the MGM Grand Hotel, said three Saudi Arabians alone had dropped more than $1-million in five days at the Mero Club.

Arabs have been flying in from the Middle East in the last several weeks in private jets, Mr. Jaeger said, and gambling at MGM, Caesar's Palace, the Sands and other casinos.

Three of the Arabs stayed in $850-a-day suites at the Grand on the same penthouse floor as the Metro Club.

The Arabs, in their 30's and 40's and most of them graduates of American or British universities, wore conservative black business suits instead of turbans and white flowing robes.

"Each prince walked into the club with three guards in front of him, three behind him and one on each side," Mr. Jaeger said.

A security guard said that their own cook prepared food flown in from Saudi Arabia and that before the princes would eat, tasters would sample their food.

They gambled only with $500 chips, placing, but at a time on single bets, the casino maximum for a single bet is $2,000.

Mr. Jaeger said that one Arab won $200,000 one night but that the casino came out well ahead most of the time.

The Arabs were not only big gamblers but big tippers. A security guard said that each of the room maids got $30 and that a woman photographer got $250 for a shot of the three princes together.

Especially Fitted - Di Pierre Fur 1957

King Saud bin Abdulaziz al Saud

Nasser and Egypt

Colonel Gamal Abdul Nasser and General Mohammad Naquib
lead the Free Officer's Movement in Egypt in 1952

Prince Talal bin Abdulaziz al Saud, heads the Free Princes Movement in Saudi Arabia

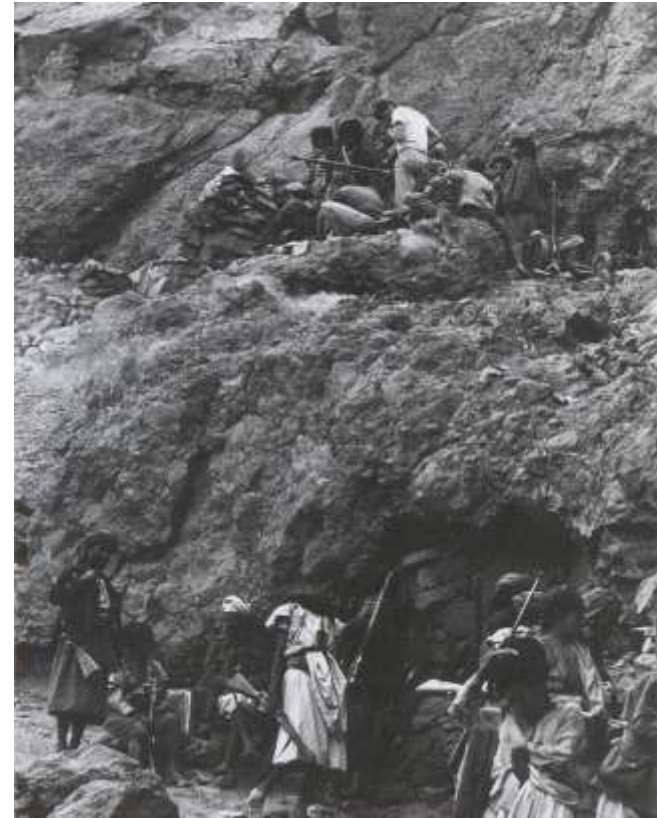

Yemen

Mutawakkilite Kingdom (north Yemen)

Yemeni Royalist forces attempt to repel an Egyptian armored attack.

Yemeni Royalist rebels set up a heavy machine gun above a hideout cave

Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser and Crown Prince Faisal bin Abdulaziz al Saud.

Prince Abdullah bin Abdulaziz.
Progressive, tolerant, pragmatic.
Not aligned with family factions.

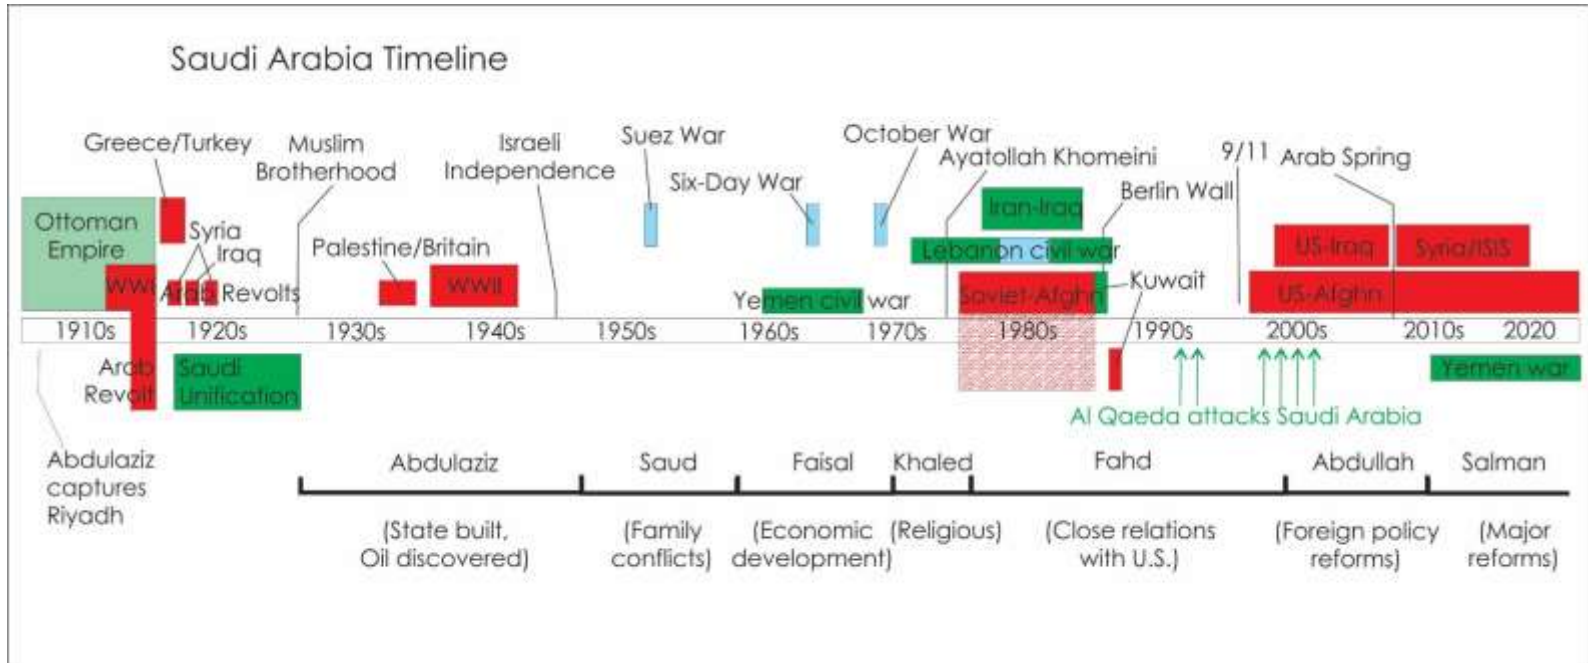

Prince Talal bin Abdulaziz. Liberal leader of the “Free Princes Movement” reconciles with Crown Prince Faisal.

King Faisal

King Faisal bin Abdulaziz al Saud

Saudi Arabia Timeline

King Faisal bin Abdulaziz al Saud

Crown Prince Khaled bin Abdulaziz.
Religious, congenial, stable, honest.

The Six-Day War

Israel before 1967

1967, Israel attacks Egypt, Jordan and Syria, captures Gaza, Sinai, West Bank and Golan Heights.

Israeli troops enter the Old City of Jerusalem, June 7, 1967

Islamic Resurgence

Defeat in the 1967 war, among other things, spurred the Islamic Resurgence of the 1970s

Anwar Sadat, third President of Egypt

Cease-Fire Lines After the Six-Day War

Territory held by Israel after the 1967 Six Day War

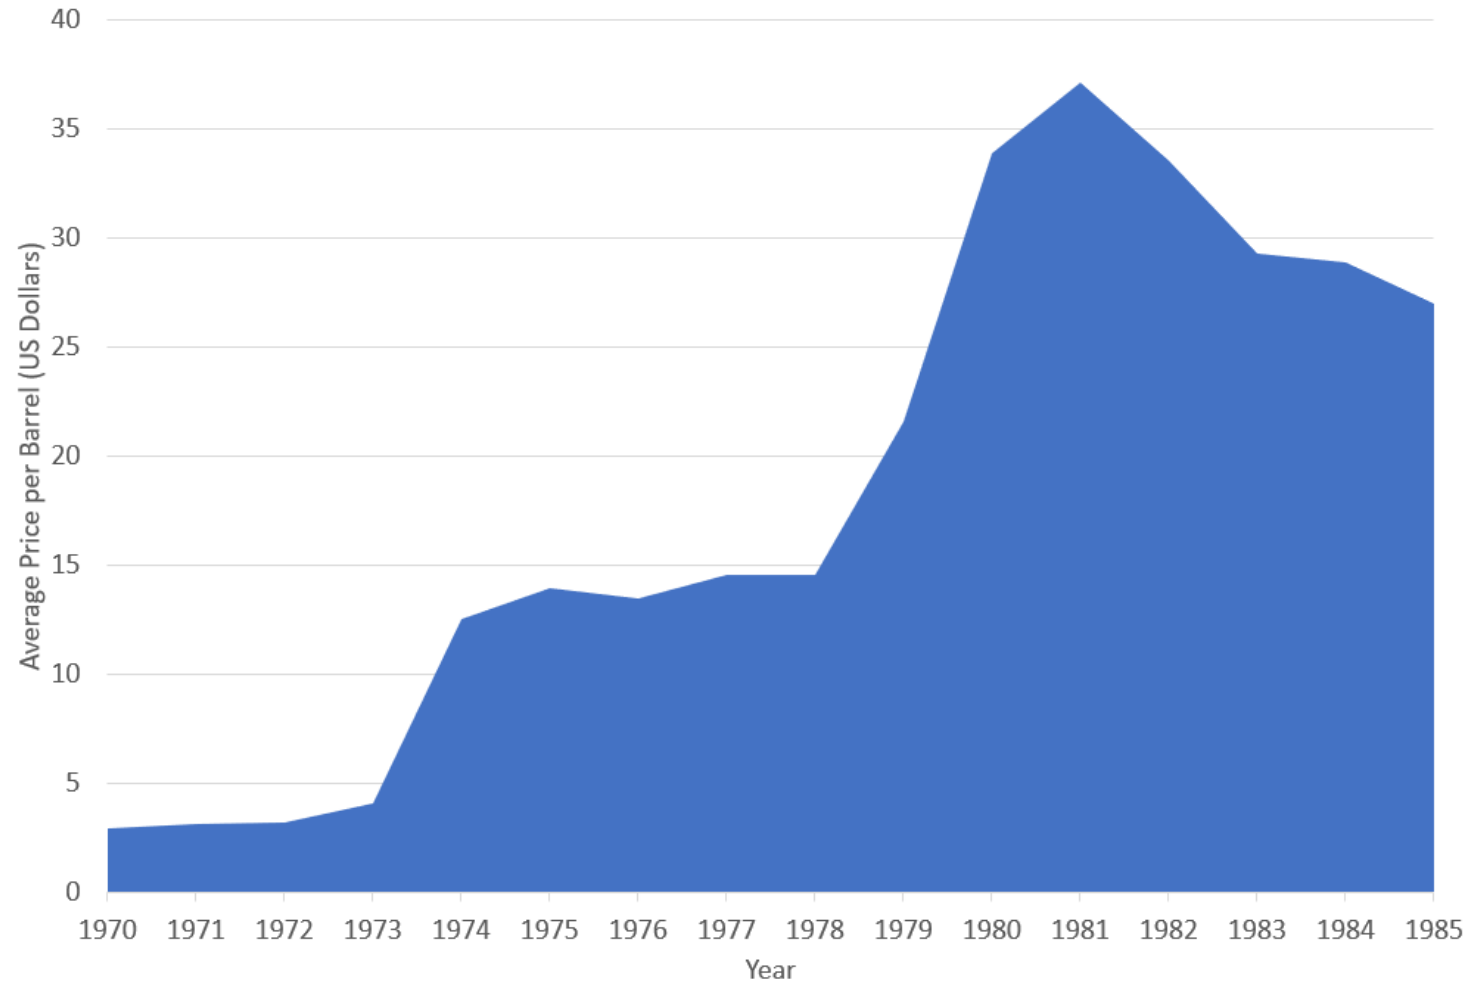

Cease-Fire Lines After the Six-Day War

October 6, 1973, Egyptian surprise attack across the Suez Canal,
Syrian tanks attack the Golan Heights

King Faisal of Saudi Arabia
Imposed the Arab oil embargo on October 14, 1973.

Crude Oil Prices

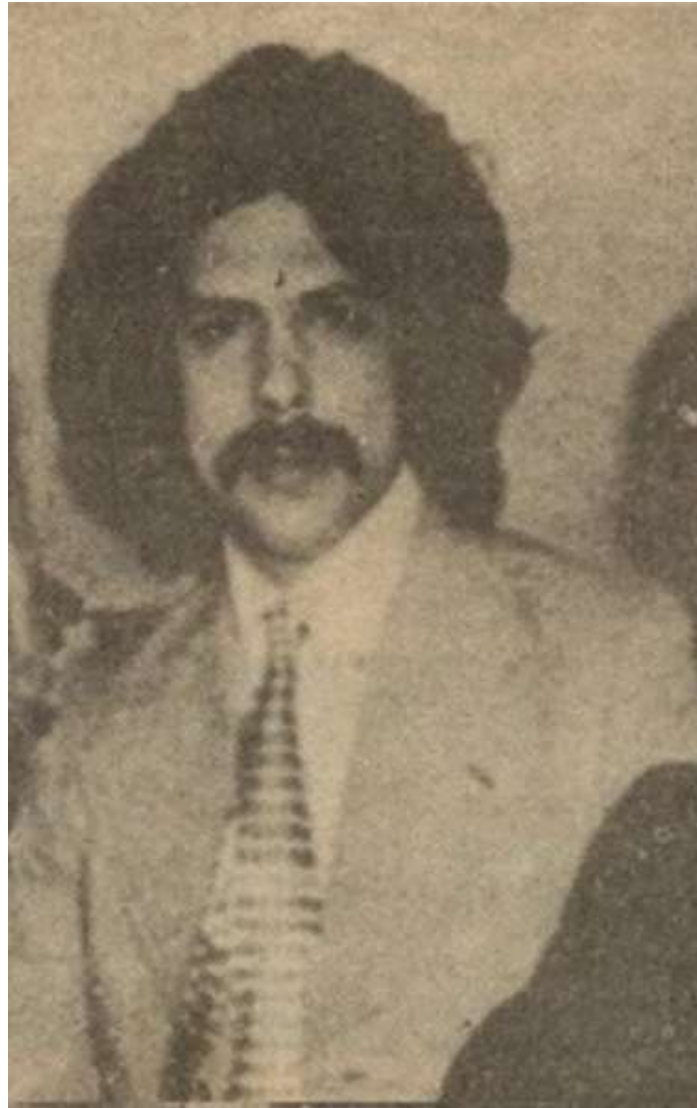

November 13, 1973, U.S. Congress approved the Trans-Alaska oil pipeline

King Faisal bin Abdulaziz al Saud

King Faisal's assassin, Prince Faisal bin Musaid bin Abdulaziz al Saud

Deera Square in Riyadh, where public executions are carried out.
(aka al-Safaa (Justice) Square and “Chop Chop” Square.)

King Kahlid bin Abdulaziz al Saud

SAUDI ARABIA

Chris Schaefer

Chris.Schaefer@bataandiary.com

832-428-1977

Copies of all slides are available at:
www.bataandiary.com/SA.html

